An Intriguing Lake

A lake so murky, intriguing, and great,
Don't worry; cast out your line, fishing can't wait.
So earthy, and such an impure green, with such wiry grass,
In nature's beauty, in this lake you cannot pass.

In the presence of a hawk, a minnow, a mouse,
Far from my grandparent's house.
An old but fresh smell,
On such a tranquil, tremendous lake,
That I know so calm and well.
